

Aboriginal Engagement

How the South Australian resources industry is engaging with Aboriginal people.

The South Australian Chamber of Mines and Energy is pleased to bring you news about some of the ways the mining and energy sectors in the State are actively and constructively engaging with Aboriginal communities and individuals. These stories are just a sampling of the valuable work taking place in the South Australian resources industry. They are a visible demonstration of a commitment to corporate social responsibility and of the benefits such relationships can bring.

ISSUE ONE - SEPTEMBER 2008

- PAGE 2 Recruiting Indigenous people at Whyalla - OneSteel's community partnership approach
- PAGE 3 Brokering support for Indigenous employment - The Commonwealth Government's program for matching the needs of mining companies and Indigenous communities
- PAGE 4 Connecting industry and community - COMPLETE Personnel links local Indigenous people and mining companies
- PAGE 5 Aboriginal Workforce Development - The SA Minister reports on working towards the State's goals of economic development and social inclusion
- PAGE 6 Making good relations a priority - Stuart Petroleum helping achieve economic independence for the Dieri people
- PAGE 6 Aboriginal Access Centre - Marg Mibus describes her part in creating quality education training and employment opportunities
- PAGE 8 Aiming high - BHP Billiton outlines its plan for Indigenous employment

Painted image courtesy of artist Robert Habel